

Halloween date gone wrong

AUTHORS: MÁRTON ALBERT AND ZOLTÁN FARKAS / 9.C

Once upon a time there was a young couple who wanted to go to the seashore for an evening date. The sun started to go down while they were still on their way in the middle of the forest. There was no light, just the car's reflector made the road visible. Suddenly, Peter stepped on the break as he saw a woman with bloody clothes on waving and screaming at them in the middle of the road. The newly-weds stopped to ask what her problem was. The mysterious woman said that she and her sister had got into a car accident and her sibling was lying unconsciously on the passenger seat. As fast as they could, they ran to the woman's wrecked car with a first-aid kit. When they got there, they couldn't find the injured girl. Then, as they turned around the strange woman disappeared. Both Peter and Brittney were incredibly confused about where the lady had gone. At that exact moment, they were knocked down and they woke up in a dark basement with their hands and legs tied together. Peter and Brittney managed to free themselves by getting a guard's keys when he wasn't paying attention. After that, they escaped to a neighbouring house, where they asked the owner to let them use a phone, so they could call the police. However, they realised that the cable of the phone was cut, and as they turned around a gun was pointed at them by the owner. The man who lived there made a phone call to the ones who wanted to torture the innocent couple. Peter tried to take the gun from the elderly but physically strong man and after some fight he succeeded. They had immediately dialled the police, but then the gang members showed up and started a huge gun fight. Peter and Brittney started to run out of ammo and the enemy almost got into the house, when the police finally arrived and saved them. Afterwards, the investigators told the couple that they had unfortunately bumped into the forest's 'Deadly Squad' who intimidate and excruciate people for fun. Peter and Brittney in the end were extremely lucky that they had survived, but they had fun during their date by the seashore.